

Thorough hand decontamination remains the most effective method for controlling the spread of infection.
Basic sinks are usually sufficient.