

Using harsh antiseptics kills healing cells along with bacteria and delays the recovery process.

The scorched-earth protocol was deemed slightly excessive for routine maintenance.