Dermal anchors placed in areas with high joint movement and friction are highly likely to reject.

Professional mimes severely underestimate knuckle friction.