

European regulators restricted specific blue and green pigments due to missing safety data.
The primary colors were hiding something all along.