

The structural chemistry of phenol provides useful antimicrobial activity while simultaneously posing risks of tissue and eye irritation.
Burning retinas are a terrible substitute for safety data.