

Government assessments recognize that specific modern preservative systems effectively maintain microbiological quality under evaluated conditions.

Sometimes the tiny molecular barrier actually wins the war.