
The photochromic system currently lacks a true white pigment and cannot lighten existing skin tones. Painting the void is harder than it looks.