Increased skin pigmentation naturally diminishes the visual contrast between the activated dye and the surrounding tissue. Subtle art requires aggressive magnification.