

The photochromic dyes are encased in microscopic spheres of a material commonly known as plexiglass.

A window installation for the dermis.