

The pigments switch on when you shine a 365-nanometre ultraviolet light on them.
The sun is an absolute menace to covert artistry