Applying sunscreen to an unhealed tattoo risks trapping irritants in an open wound until the epidermal peeling phase is entirely resolved.

Patience is a virtue rarely found in friends holding buckets of lotion.