

Red ink loses up to 40 percent of its density after a decade, while black ink retains 85 percent.
Gravity always wins when the colour eventually gets tired.