The vast majority of raised tissues on healing cartilage are temporary irritation bumps caused by mechanical stress rather than true keloids.

Genetics rarely dictate heavy metal fashion choices.