Anodised titanium achieves its colour through a surface oxide layer rather than applied pigment.

Yelling at physics rarely changes the outcome.