

The immune system identifies the jewelry as foreign and works mechanically to expel it toward the surface over time.

The medieval siege engines proved wildly ineffective against the brow ring.