

Surface piercings have inherently high rejection rates because they are a mechanical compromise lacking structural depth.

Physics remains undefeated in this ongoing rivalry.