

A safety data sheet details product components, while a certificate of analysis shows if a production run meets specification.

A flawless recipe still requires a taste test.