

Implant-grade materials arrive with aging data primarily because medical regulators demand documentation, not due to different chemistry.

The true magic was just a very large stack of incredibly boring paperwork all along.