A tapered friction connection creates an incredibly tight seal that blocks microscopic invaders from entering the internal chamber.

The best defense is a door that simply refuses to open.