

Delivering excessive energy density fragments pigment inefficiently and instead leads to wholesale heating and blistering.

The fugitive decides that since a small spark works well a dynamite plunger will surely finish the job before lunch.