Treating areas close to the eye requires the placement of solid opaque shields directly over the patient.

The village elder ensures absolute ocular safety by burying the client head beneath a massive oak cask.