

For treatment sites away from the face, closed-eye protocols coupled with opaque protective shields remain standard practice.

The medieval armour approach seemed slightly overcautious.