

Immune cells engulf dermal pigment particles and transport them to regional lymph nodes.

The body runs a highly efficient underground baggage service.