

A man in a red and blue robe, resembling a Roman or Greek deity, stands on the left, holding a large, ornate tattoo machine. The machine has a large copper coil and a needle assembly. He is looking towards a crowd of green, goblin-like creatures on the right. The background features a large, domed building with classical architecture. A stone sign with the number '100' is visible on the building. A speech bubble above the man contains the text 'You shall not pass!'.

You shall not pass!

Tattoo pigments frequently contain nanoparticle-sized fractions smaller than 100 nanometres that migrate beyond the dermal injection site.
We prefer our art to stay exactly where we put it.