The permanent cross-linked network structure creates a thermoset that cannot be melted or dissolved without breaking chemical bonds.

The solid block remains completely unimpressed by boiling water.