

The permanent cross-linked network structure cannot be melted or dissolved without breaking chemical bonds.
Fondue night revealed profound misunderstandings regarding the thermal limitations of high-performance plastics.