

Northern Ireland operates under European chemical regulations while the rest of the United Kingdom follows an independent system.

The invisible border line makes the ink feel totally different.