
European regulators reclassified colloidal silver as a reproductive hazard, effectively banning its use in body art applications.

The vampires lobbied heavily for this highly specific legislative victory.