European rules restrict the rate at which nickel migrates from piercing jewellery but do not mandate a specific medical-grade material.

Setting tiny traps to catch escaping metal flakes is considered an advanced technique.