

Body jewellery legally manufactured in the United States may fail European chemical release tests upon arrival.
The transatlantic flight is perfectly safe but the metal suffers from severe culture shock.