

British regulators will conduct independent risk assessments moving forward rather than automatically adopting external safety opinions.

Reinventing the wheel but insisting ours must be ever so slightly oval.