

Regulatory restrictions cover a vast array of chemicals, explicitly including precursor components that eventually degrade into targeted acids over time.

Genealogy research has gotten wildly out of hand.