

Ink manufacturers must screen product formulations to identify precursor chemicals that eventually degrade into trifluoroacetic acid. Thorough screenings uncover shady molecular stowaways.