

A disciple learns the tradition by memorizing, practicing, and serving the master rather than immediately holding a needle. Sweeping the floor built immense character but severely delayed the actual tattooing part.