

Ageing skin steadily loses structural collagen, severely narrowing the safe depth window for retaining pigment.
Building heavy monuments on thinning foundations requires excellent balance.