

Polytetrafluoroethylene resists solvent swelling because its tightly packed crystalline structure blocks liquid absorption.
The ultimate defense technique requires absolute stillness.