

Removing packages before the drying phase concludes allows ambient environmental microbes to wick directly through the wet paper barrier.

A thirsty pouch drinks whatever floats past.