

The heat-resistant spores used in biological indicators do not give false positive results.
Blaming a defective test vial is the sterile processing equivalent of the dog eating your homework.