Written aftercare instructions and signed consent forms provide documented evidence that a professional standard of care was met.

A well-documented client is structurally immune to floating away.