

High-value, extremely portable body jewellery requires specific stock limits because general policies restrict coverage for valuable metals.

The dog is just a precaution.