

Most studio policies are strictly premises-specific and require a separate extension to cover procedures performed at external conventions.

Packing light is highly overrated.