

Commodity steel alloys sold for piercings contain a substantial fraction of the most common contact allergen.

The real treasure was the impurities along the way.