

Commodity steel alloys typically contain nickel which is a primary trigger for contact dermatitis.
Biceps are remarkably ineffective against an immune response.