

South Korean courts ruled that ordinary tattooing by nonmedical practitioners does not constitute unlicensed medical practice.

Brain surgery remains off the menu for the foreseeable future.