Photoacoustic imaging uses short bursts of light to create sound waves that reveal hidden ink deposits. The ink literally sings under interrogation.