The industry tends to treat supplier paperwork as something assembled for an inspection rather than something used to decide whether a product enters a client's skin.

The fragrant potion returned peacefully to the swamp.