

The issue of finished-product contamination is separate from occupational exposure, and one test does not answer both.
Wearing safety goggles does very little to protect the client's dermis from a bad batch.