

316L surgical steel contains roughly 10% to 14% nickel by weight.
The body modification industry doubles as a robust savings account.