

Industrial grade propylene glycol contains toxic contaminants, meaning only pharmaceutical grades belong in a dermal wound.

Antifreeze makes it remarkably difficult to sit still.