Prolonged exposure to ultraviolet light causes certain brightly colored azo pigments to degrade into hazardous compounds.

Even the sun tattoo prefers to stay in the shade.